The Illuminated Chronicle

The Illuminated Chronicle, a magnificent illuminated manuscript created around 1358, serves as a vibrant testament to St. Stephen's reign. Its exquisite paintings depict the king's coronation, his battles against pagan rulers, and the establishment of Christianity in Hungary.

The Golden Age

Under the reign of King Matthias Corvinus (1458-1490), St. Stephen's Kingdom experienced a golden age of prosperity and cultural flourishing.

Matthias, a renowned patron of the arts and sciences, transformed Buda into a vibrant center of humanism and scholarship.

The Thuróczi Chronicle

The Thuróczi Chronicle, written by the humanist scholar Johannes de Thurócz in 1488, chronicles the kingdom's history from its mythical origins to the reign of Matthias Corvinus. Its detailed accounts and evocative illustrations provide a captivating glimpse into the kingdom's golden age.

The Ottoman Wars

The 16th century marked a tumultuous period for St. Stephen's Kingdom, as it faced the encroaching Ottoman Empire. The kingdom valiantly resisted the Ottoman advance, but by the mid-16th century, large parts of the country had fallen under Ottoman rule.

The Bonfini Decades

Antonio Bonfini, an Italian humanist, chronicled the kingdom's turbulent history during the Ottoman wars in his Decades. Written in Latin, Bonfini's work provides a vivid account of the kingdom's struggles and the heroic resistance of its people.

The Seventeenth Century: Decline and Renewal

The 17th century witnessed both decline and renewal for St. Stephen's Kingdom. The Ottoman occupation led to economic and political instability, but the kingdom also experienced a cultural and religious revival.

The Zrínyi Epic

The Zrínyi Epic, a monumental poem written by the Croatian poet Miklós Zrínyi, immortalized the kingdom's struggle against the Ottoman Empire. Zrínyi's epic verse recounts the heroic deeds of his ancestors and celebrates the indomitable spirit of the Hungarian people.
