Ever, a first-generation Chinese American raised in the heart of New York City, finds herself torn between the cultural expectations of her family and her own secret dreams. To her parents' dismay, Ever yearns to escape the confines of the traditional path they have set for her. When a scholarship opportunity arises for her to join the inaugural voyage of the Loveboat, a floating university semester that sails the Pacific Ocean, Ever seizes the chance to break free and explore her true passions.

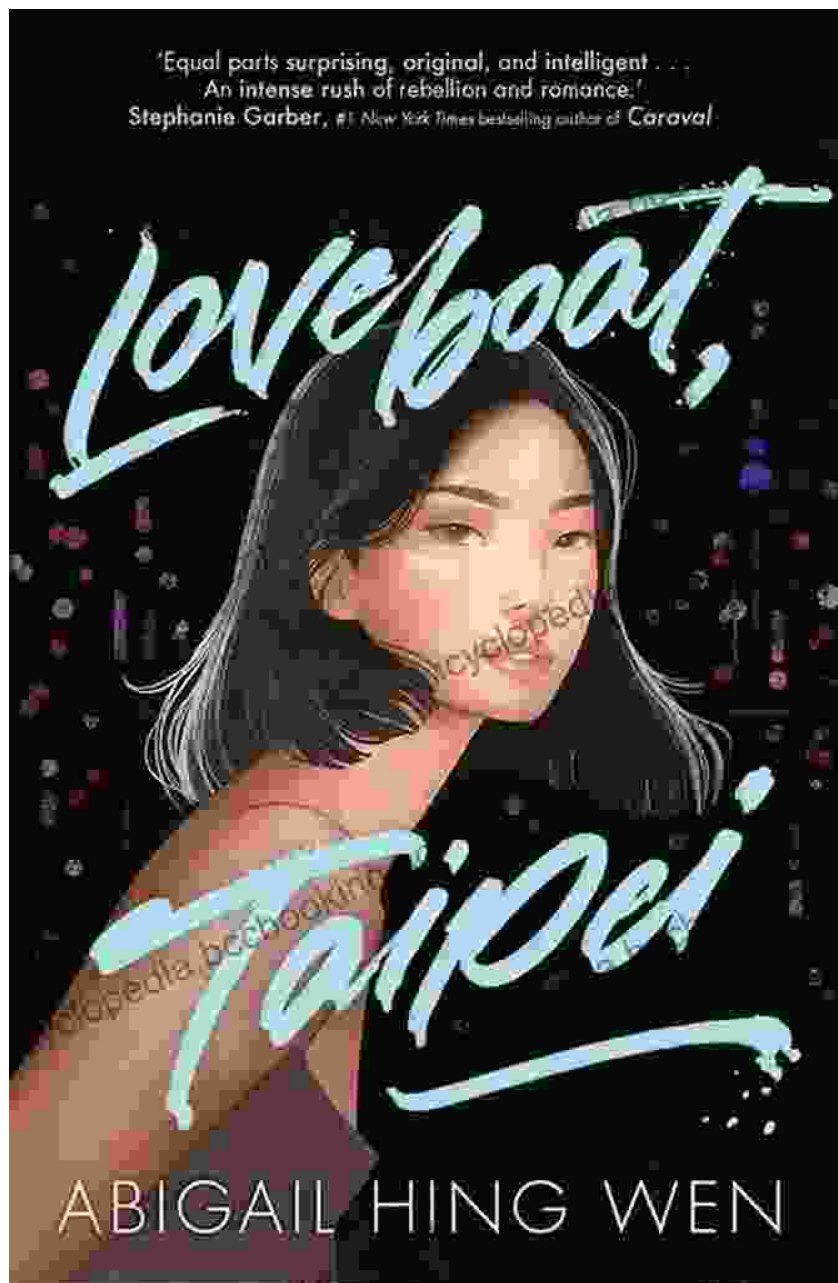

As the Loveboat sets sail, Ever is thrust into a diverse and enigmatic group of fellow students. There's Rick, the charming and adventurous son of a diplomat, who awakens Ever's wanderlust; Sophie, the enigmatic and alluring daughter of a wealthy Taiwanese family, who challenges Ever's notions of love and relationships; and Xavier, a brilliant and thoughtful computer science major, who helps Ever navigate the complexities of her own cultural identity.

As the Loveboat navigates its way through exotic ports and breathtaking landscapes, Ever finds herself immersed in a world that is both exhilarating and transformative. She embraces the vibrant culture of Taipei, tantalized by its delectable street food and vibrant nightlife. She delves into her own Chinese heritage, discovering the rich history and customs of her ancestors. And amidst the breathtaking sunsets and starlit skies over the ocean, she explores the depths of her own heart, falling head over heels in love for the first time.

However, Ever's dream-like summer is not without its challenges. Cultural clashes, family expectations, and the complexities of love and relationships test her newfound freedom and force her to confront her own beliefs and values. As she navigates these uncharted waters, Ever learns the true meaning of independence, the importance of following her own path, and the boundless possibilities that lie before her.
