Plot Summary

In the twilight of the Victorian era, amidst scientific advancements and societal turmoil, an ingenious inventor named Dr. Alexander Hartdegen embarks on a daring experiment. Driven by an insatiable thirst for knowledge and the allure of the unknown, he constructs a remarkable device that defies the boundaries of time itself—the Time Machine.

With a trembling hand, Hartdegen propels himself into the future, venturing through vast epochs that stretch from the idyllic Victorian era to a dystopian world of the far-distant future. Along his extraordinary journey, he encounters diverse civilizations, witnesses the rise and fall of empires, and grapples with the profound implications of time's relentless march.

The Eloi and Morlocks

In the distant future, Hartdegen encounters two distinct societies—the Eloi and the Morlocks.
